FOREPAUGH-SELLS CIRCUS.

The big Forepaugh and Sells Brothers colossal combined shows will appear next Monday in Brooklyn, where it will remain a week. The program of entertainers this year is unusually large and includes some of the most famous areneic performers in the world. Among the special features will be the famous Picchiani family of acrobats, ten in number; Minting, the marvelous unicycle expert, who performs daring feats on a single wheel; the great Kilpatrick in a perilous ride down an incline plane 100 feet high in a giant automobile. Then there are several troupes of aerialists, the fourteen champion riders of the world and a congress of gymnasts, leapers and jugglers. The famous Woodward sea lions will also be one of the big features of the performance.

WOULDN'T STAND FOR POSTERS.

[SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION.]

The people of Mount Vernon, N. Y., do not want any glaring burlesque show posters in their town. They have expressed themselves very forcibly on the subject, and that settles it.

It all came about through the preparations made for the appearance of a company described as "burlesquers." An army of bill posters swarmed through the town and posted up a few hundred red, green, yellow and cream-colored pictures of fantastic young women clad in glad smiles and very few clothes.

There had been play pictures in Mount Vernon before—in fact, Mount Vernon had been shocked in the same way on a previous occasion—but the citizens who looked at the bills posted up in the gray dawn agreed that they were the limit.

The chief poster represented an airily attired young woman in the graceful act of kicking a hat off a monocular individual's head.

Another three-sheet poster displayed a group of young women in bathing costumes trying to hide behind a yellow-striped umbrella about the size of a silver dollar, and the public were informed that they were "Three Little Bath Beach Girls."

There are no burlesque posters in Mount Vernon now. They have all been torn down, and the post boards look as if a cyclone had struck them.

MIKE BERNARD'S CHALLENGE.

The "Police Gazette" Champion Rag-time Pianist Looking for a Match.

Mike Bernard, the "Police Gazette" champion rag-time pianist, who plays for the big acts at Tony Pastor's Theatre, on Fourteenth street, and who is the proud wearer of the Richard K. Fox diamond-studded trophy, is very anxious to make a match with any rag-time pianist in the country. He claims that he can beat them all without much trouble, but he would like to demonstrate the fact in a contest.

So through Dick Bernard, the well-known comedian, he hereby issues a formal challenge to all pounders of the ivories for any amount from $1,000 to $5,000, the money to be deposited and the match to be arranged at the POLICE GAZETTE office at the convenience of the contestants.

All correspondence on the subject may be addressed to the editor of this paper, and it will receive prompt attention.

Mr. Bernard has signed a contract to appear at the Pan-American Exposition, at Buffalo, this summer, and he thinks that city would be a great place for the contest.

Frederick Heinemann's Cozy Cafe in Brooklyn, N. Y.

SUPPLEMENTS ADORN.

John H. Frazier Has Them Framed in His Fine Saloon.

There is a hotel in Brooklyn, N. Y., at the corner of East New York avenue and Sackman street. It is called Heinemann's, and by that name everybody in the Twenty-sixth ward knows it. The proprietor of the establishment is Frederick Heinemann, and to say that he is popular but mildly expresses it. He is assisted in his management of the establishment by his son, Gus, and Charles A. Schloer, both of whom are particularly expert bartenders. They are also both obliging and pleasant, and take particular interest in the welfare of the Clover Rangers and The Pinocchio Four, two clubs who hold their weekly meetings in the commodious rooms of the hotel.

At Heinemann's the guests may always be sure of the best service, as well as the finest brands of wines, liquors and cigars. The hotel has been owned and managed by Heinemann for the past twenty-five years, and he has made it one of the best in the city.

HOW SUPPLEMENTS DECORATE.

Saloonmen and others who desire to make their establishments more attractive to the general public, would do well to glance at the picture on another page, which shows the interior of John H. Frazier's cafe, at 64 South Market street, Frederick City, Md., and see what can be done with the free supplements which are issued with this paper. Mr. Frazier, who is a prominent sporting man, has made the most of the limited space at his command, and he is to be congratulated.

He is a crack bowler and a member of the Germania Bowling Club, of Baltimore. When any of the boys about town want to quench their thirst, or learn the latest in sporting circles, they go to The Diamond.

MOHAWK ATHLETIC CLUB.

[WITH PHOTO.]

The Mohawk Athletic Club was originally organized in 1896 by a few boys as a bicycle club, at 168th street and Sheridan avenue, Bronx borough, N. Y., and continued as such until July, 1900, when Mr. Al Kelpien, of the Pastime A. C., was elected an honorary member. He immediately took great interest in the club and started the members training for all kinds of track athletics, and thus organized the original athletic club of the borough. In October, 1900, the club moved to its present location, at Walton avenue, near 168th street, which afforded more room for indoor gymnastics.

Games were held regularly among the club members, and on March 9, 1901, the club made its first entry in open events at the Eighth Regiment games. Andy MacKechnie, the crack runner of the club, won second prize in the mile run, being beaten by only six inches by R. L. Sanford, of the K. A. C. This was the first race of his life, and he met and defeated such experienced men as Michael McGarry, the champion cross-country runner of New York. This picture shows the cross-country team just before the start for the championship of Bronx borough, over a five-mile course against the Orion A. C. The club won thirty-nine points to nineteen of the Orions, thus winning the junior championship of Bronx borough; they are ready to defend it against all regularly organized junior clubs. Andy MacKechnie easily won first prize, Wm. Lockwood, second; C. J. McCarthy, of the Orion A. C., was third. The rest of the team were: Robert Andrews, August Bischoff, Dan Barrett, Wm. Otto, Harry Weber, Emil Rohner, John Kerker and Henry Dorr. The time was twenty-nine minutes fifteen seconds. The officers are as follows: Walter Schmidt, president; Emil Rohner, vice-president; Walter Martens, corresponding secretary; Aug. Uhl, financial secretary; Harry Weber, treasurer; Henry Haupt, sergeant-at-arms; honorary members, Al Kelpien, Aug. Bischoff, Geo. Bischoff, Wm. Magill, Wm. O'Brien and John Vogel. The club is now in a most flourishing condition, with an active membership of over fifty and more pouring in at each meeting.

BLACK JACK'S CAREER

OF DESPERATE CRIME

ENDS ON THE GALLOWS

A Robber Who Had the Nerve and Audacity to Hold up an Express Train Single Handed.

CONDUCTOR POTTED HIM WITH A SHOTGUN.

He Was Found Later by a Posse, Badly Wounded, His Ammunition Gone, but He Put up a Fierce Fight Before Capture.

"Black Jack," one of the most desperate men of the Southwest, has just ended his career on a gallows in Clayton, N. M., which was built in an inclosed stockade. He and his gang made history in that country, but the last train has been robbed and the last man shot now.

Early in his career a price was placed on his head, and it was worth $10,000 for any man to bring him into Springer, or deliver his dead body to the coroner. He was under cover and alone in the mountains at that time, and one night he buckled on a pair of 45-calibre revolvers and, with a Winchester, started out to commit the greatest crime ever attempted by one man. He walked to the town of Folsom and waited for Colorado and Southern train No. 1. Unobserved he climbed to the top of the express car and presently the train started up. He crawled over the top of the car inch by inch until he reached the forward end, from which point he slipped to the tender of the engine. The train was making up time and was running at an unusually high rate of speed. When it neared the spot where a former robbery occurred, "Black Jack" appeared before the engineer and fireman and covered them with his rifle.

"Stop the train," he yelled. The engineer knew better than to disobey. The train slowed up and as it came to a stop "Black Jack" fired three or four shots from his repeater to create the impression that a gang of robbers were there.

The transcript of record of the district court of Union county in the case of "Black Jack" tells what occurred after the bandit stopped the train. "The defendant compelled the fireman," states the record, "to get off the engine and go back and attempt to cut loose the express car. As the fireman and 'Black Jack' went from the engine to the express car, the United States mail agent opened the door to put out the mail, as he supposed that the train had reached the station. 'Black Jack' thereupon shot him in the jaw and compelled another man to get out of the express car to assist the fireman to attempt to cut loose the express car. They were unable to uncouple the car and 'Black Jack' then took them to the engine and compelled him to come out with him to uncouple the car. He repeatedly threatened to shoot members of the train crew.

"He was only prevented from carrying out his intentions of robbing the train and express car by receiving a gunshot wound from the conductor, which disabled him, and during the assault upon the train he fired several shots at other members of the train crew, but fortunately not injuring them, other than the mail agent, who was shot through the jaw, and the conductor, who received a bullet in the arm."

While "Black Jack" was standing over the men, commanding them to uncouple the car, the conductor, who had been held up six times previously by the gang, appeared carrying a short-barreled shotgun under his coat. When he heard the shots he put out all the lights and then he started out in the darkness, intending to sell his life dearly. A charge of buckshot from the conductor's shotgun tore the right arm of "Black Jack," shattering the bones.

At the same time the conductor also was shot in the arm. The assault upon the train thereupon ceased.

Word of the occurrence was sent to Folsom and posses were organized and started out. The conductor said that he saw only one robber. The engineer, fireman and express messenger also said that only one man had stopped the train. At daylight the wounded "Black Jack" was found sitting beneath a clump of dwarf cedars in a narrow canon a few miles from the scene of the attempted train robbery. He defied the officers. His ammunition was gone, but he cursed his captors and, though he was weak from the loss of blood, he tried to fight them away. He told them that he was George Stevens, and that his home was in Panhandle, Tex., but he was recognized as "Black Jack," and finally he confessed his identity. It was found necessary to amputate his injured arm, and he refused to take any anesthetic to ease the pain of the operation. He seemed anxious to die, and while he was in jail at Las Vegas he attempted suicide by the poison route. Later the prisoner set himself to work writing a history of the "Black Jack" gang of train robbers, and he sent the manuscripts to one of his friends in Texas with instructions that it should be published after his death. The history is in the nature of a confession, and it tells about the work done by the band. The writer, however, refrains from mentioning the name of any of the members who are now enjoying their freedom. Near Baldy and at many other places along the route of the Colorado and Southern and Santa Fe railways, he and his men held up trains. He refers, jestingly, to the fact that a reward of $1,000 was paid an officer in Southern Arizona in 1896 for killing a man who was supposed to be "Black Jack," and says that the poor fellow who was shot was not a train robber at all.

The trial of the famous bandit took place at Clayton and occupied a week, during all of which time the court house was surrounded by a picket of deputy marshals, who were on hand to prevent an attempt at rescue.

It developed during the trial "Black Jack" had a wealthy brother, engaged in the cattle business. This brother spent thousands of dollars in trying to save the neck of the prisoner. He lives at San Angelo, Tex., and he is regarded as one of the most upright and industrious citizens of that part of the State.

Haynes first came to Chicago's barber notice in '96, when he bought up every razor in the Chicago pawnshops, and after having them ground over he traded them off to a big profit. Some of his close friends estimate that he cleared up something like $1,000 on the deal. He practically had a corner on second hand razors in Chicago at that time. A few months later he introduced to Chicago barbers

[SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION.]

Imagine a good-looking young woman, dressed like the principal boy in an English pantomime, dropping suddenly on your breakfast table as you were finishing your first cup of coffee. It would jar you a bit, wouldn't it? Well, it amounted to the same thing, when a nimble and graceful aeronaut—or aeronautess, I don't know which—came plumply down in a negro camp outside of Atlanta, Ga., the other day. They were having a fine time over their afternoon meal, and not expecting any spiritual visitations, when she came floating down. They caught one glimpse of the pink tights—real silk, at $22 a pair—and then they fled, yelling that the day of judgment had come, sure enough.

Look out for the lady with a gun! The heavyweight soubrette of a burlesque company which recently played Detroit, Mich., had a little argument with the manager during which she became unduly excited. She proceeded to unload her arsenal in the shape of a revolver of large calibre, and when she pointed at the man who owned the show he took the door on a run. She held the stage door for half an hour, then she was discharged by telephone.

Dakota Women Adopt Novel Means to Raise a Mortgage.

"You can't look at our bloomers," is the latest edict which has been issued by a leading school of Baltimore, Md., nearly all the members of which are athletes.

The bloomer act in public has been cut out of their repertoire, and if there is any meandering about the "gym" by the girls while bloomer-clad the only persons present will be their interesting selves.

There is a merry row over this stand taken by the young women students. The boys are indignant, and the girls declare they don't care a rap what the boys think.

Affairs were brought to this acute stage by the ousting of the male students from the "gym," where the girls had arranged a basketball game. They were going to be real up-to-date ladies, appear in bloomers and struggle and fight for victory.

The classes include some of the prettiest maidens, ranging from sixteen to twenty years, in Maryland. The leaders of the basketball team had concluded that if bathing costumes were all right at the seashore there could be no harm in wearing bloomers in the "gym." The boys of the school were extended invitations. They came, filled with joyous expectations of a pretty spectacle, but they were disappointed.

The girls did not come trooping into the arena and then stand in pretty confusion, as the boys had fondly pictured. But some one appeared and told the boys to get out. Then there was fun. The students who had been waiting so patiently to give the athletes a rousing welcome got angry.

They explained that they had made great sacrifice to see the contest; had done all in their power to bring it about, and were there on invitations given by the captains of the respective teams, but it was no go.

The girls had changed their minds. The boys had to go. Then the game went on; but it was not as enthusiastic a contest as some of the girls thought it would have been had the boys been on hand to encourage them. Some even assert that it was tame, as two professors, who were the only men present, did not make the contest lively.

How They Raised the Coin.

Wearied by the procrastination of the men of the congregation, the women of a leading church of Denton, N. D., took it upon themselves recently to raise the funds to pay off a mortgage, and their original methods are meeting with all kinds of success.

The woman who has so far collected the most money for the mortgage fund opened a barber shop in her home. She had practiced so frequently on her husband's beard that she is an expert manipulator of a razor, and her fame as a barber has gone forth so that young men drive to Denton from surrounding villages in order to be shaved by her. Another woman, noted for her culinary ability, spends the mornings baking fancy pies and cakes and in afternoons and evenings goes around the village selling her wares at a price that, though pronounced as high as the steeple of the church, is declared not a whit too high.

Half a dozen of the women, whose particular fad is athletics, go to their neighbors and ask employment as choppers of kindling wood. They handle the axe with a vigor that makes the splinters fly, and the financial result is satisfactory. Other women make candy and sell it. Still others skillful with the needle have hired out as dressmakers at double the usual price. The result is that money is pouring in at a rate which promises to settle the mortgage within a very short time. Meantime the men of the congregation are going around with sheepish faces.

PROF. MULDOON ON ATHLETIC DEVELOPMENT

Different Exercises Needed to Build up Flesh and Muscle---To Take off Weight.

Functions of a Good Trainer.

(WRITTEN SPECIALLY FOR THE POLICE GAZETTE.)

Prof. William Muldoon, the former champion Greco-Roman wrestler of the world, has had experience in training such famous exponents of the fist art as John L. Sullivan, Jack Dempsey, Jake Kilrain and "Kid" McCoy which qualifies him to talk intelligently on the subject of training. His own robust appearance in itself is an endorsement of the methods he employs at his sanitarium at Rye, N. Y. When the writer saw him the other day he looked as young and his step was as light and elastic as it was twenty years ago, when he made his first appearance on the stage with Mme. Modjeska, as Charlie, the Wrestler, in "As You Like It." The professor was asked how he built up the shattered physical wrecks of the dissipated or overworked, and placed pugilists in the ring fit to fight for their lives.

"There are no rules for training a man. There can be none," he replied. "Proper training for one man would break down another. Individuals and their physical needs vary as widely as do the seasons. I have had many gentlemen under my care, men of the world on whose constitutions years of rapid living had made serious inroads, men who had spent half a lifetime defying all laws of nature, and were trying to regain that which they had lost; business men, who in this hunt for money had kept up a strain on their power of endurance which had deprived them of half the pleasures of life; pugilists whose stock in trade is perfect physical condition.

"I have had them all, but have never yet found any two men on whom the same treatment would have the same effect. Common-sense application of the laws of nature, plain food, fresh air and out-door exercise are all that are needed to perfect a man's physical condition. Some trainers entirely ignore the mental feeling of their patient and depend entirely on physical exertion. In this they are wrong, for without mental diversion no one can hope to become physically perfect or anywhere near perfect.

"It is easy to put a man in good physical shape. Take, for instance, a man whose constitution has been broken down by constant application to business. If he is not afflicted with some organic disease I will almost guarantee to place him in good shape in two months if he will follow my directions. I have tried it so often when physicians have failed, and have met with such success, that I feel confident of my ability to do so.

"Physical condition in man is very deceptive. I cannot tell, nor can anyone else, by looking at a man whether or not he is in good condition. How often do you hear, when two pugilists step into a ring and remove their coats, the exclamation of the spectators as to their condition. One may be a trifle fleshy, the other apparently nothing but bone and sinew. People will look with admiration at the man whose muscles seem to stand out like whipcords and feel sorry for the flabby-looking fellow. But until they go to work and the lung-power, or 'wind,' as many term it, is tested, you can form no opinion as to their condition. The ideal-looking athlete may be like a locomotive without steam. He has been overtrained.

The appearance, therefore, of a man in the ring is not a good way to judge of his condition. Take 'Kid' McCoy, for instance. He never shows muscle when in condition. Tom Sharkey, on the other hand, when he is at his best, looks all bone and muscle.

"If there are no set rules for training, what is your method?"

"Why, I watch my man and note the effect of the course. It is not easy to make a mistake if you apply a little common sense to your methods."

"What do you do with a pugilist when you have one in training?"

"Well, to begin with, I have him out of bed at 6 o'clock every morning. There is no getting out of this. He must get up promptly at that hour. Once out of bed he first goes through a dumb-bell exercise, using one pound bells; then with salt water taken from the ocean he is sponged off, after the chill has been taken off the water. Then he is given a thorough rubbing down, both with hands and towels. After dressing he goes for a short stroll in the sun. Breakfast is ready when he returns. It is not an elaborate affair, but consists of cracked wheat or oatmeal well cooked, tea and toast, soft boiled eggs, and either a piece of fried chicken or one chop. There is but one kind of meat, and very little of that.

"Then for an hour he reads the papers, after which he dresses for a walk in good woolen clothes. Particular care is taken that his feet are comfortably dressed. He starts out at an easy pace. I always try to pick out a new walk every day so that it will prove interesting. If possible, I like to have a good many hills to clamber over, as climbing up and down hill exercises two sets of muscles. Cross-country runs are the best in the world. A distance of seven or eight miles is at first covered, increasing the pace gradually. When about one mile from home I start him into an easy jog.

"This is kept up until within 100 yards of the house, when we spurt for the room. Inside the room he is undressed as soon as possible and wrapped up in a blanket or robe. Then I give him a swallow of hot water and gin or hot lemonade to warm his stomach. After a sweat of a few minutes he is rubbed down with coarse towels and again wrapped up in dry blankets. Once more he is rubbed down with towels, and then for half a minute stands under a salt water shower.

"Again he is rubbed down; this time the attendant wrings his hands until the skin is dry and smooth. Then he dresses in good warm clothing, and after half an hour's rest sits down to a hearty dinner of bouillon, roast beef or mutton, plenty of vegetables and half a pint of good Burgundy. He is not given too much meat, as meat makes the stomach feverish. If he is not hungry I do not give him anything to tempt his appetite, but let him regain it in a natural way. For the first two or three weeks I do not give him any liquor at all; only bouillon or calvesfoot jelly or tea. When at weight Burgundy is allowed, but only a pint a day, taken at two meals—dinner and supper. After dinner, say two hours after, he punches the bag, skips the rope or spars with me for an hour.

"Then he is sponged off and again rubbed down. Half an hour later he has his supper, consisting of apple sauce and fruit, toast, half a pint of Burgundy and a piece of cold chicken and jelly. The evening I try and make pass as pleasantly as possible in some form of amusement, and by 9 or 10 o'clock he is in bed, after having a good hand rubbing. He always sleeps between blankets. I do not insist on his going to bed unless he feels like it, but after a day's work he generally likes to rest. Such is the treatment I give him. As the time for his engagement draws near he will be made to work harder. He will run more and walk faster, and punch the bag for a certain number of three-minute rounds with the usual one-minute rest. Then I find out what distance he can cover in three minutes, and measure it off. I let him run that distance, rest a minute, and then run it over again, keeping this up for some time. That is how one man would be trained, but the same treatment would not agree with another man."

"But don't you ever take him for a long walk before breakfast?"

"No. No other sensible man would. This stuff about men doing fifteen or twenty miles before breakfast is all both. They don't do it. It would fag them out and break their spirit."

"How long do you consider a proper time for a man to remain in training?"

"Three weeks of actual training should put any one who is not afflicted with some organic trouble in good shape, though he should have one month preparation for this training. What I mean by preparation is this: If a man has been addicted to liquor, cut off his supply. He should go on a sea voyage or out into the country, where he can have pure air and rest and quiet. He should eat plain, common food, and be regular in his habits. A month of this will put him in shape for the hard work of the training proper."

This article concludes the series on training. Next week a special article on how to handle a fighter in the ring, with suggestions from some of the most experienced pugilists and seconds in the world, will be given.

AMATEUR CHAMPIONS OF CANADA.

Good Sport Marred by the Unfair Work of Incompetent Judges.

The fifth annual tournament of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union, for the boxing and wrestling championships of Canada, was held under the auspices of the Argonaut Rowing Club, Toronto, Ontario, at the Mutual Street Rink, April 11, 12 and 13, and afforded great sport for the large crowd present each night.

All the classes, with two or three exceptions, filled well, but the enjoyment was greatly marred by the poor work of the judges, some of their decisions were extremely "raw," and they were roundly hissed by the audience. The judges favored the sluggers all the way through, and it seemed the only way to get a decision was to knock a man out, therefore the majority of the fighters did everything but kick and bite. Some very clever work was done, however, especially by A. L. Hewitt, of the bantam class, who disposed of C. Godwin after a very hard and scientific contest, and Wm. Harrison, of the 115-pound class, who showed himself a fighter all the way through. In the lightweight division, Vivian Austin, of Ottawa, won a class all by himself. In the 145-pound class was where the judging went wrong. Thompson, of Hamilton, was given the Articles of agreement were signed for a twenty round battle between "Kid" Carter of Brooklyn and Jack Bonner of Philadelphia. The pair will come together at Louisville before the Southern Athletic Club, on May 6.

FIFTEEN ROUNDS TO A DRAW.

At Allentown, Pa., on April 19, the fifteen-round bout between Jack Belschman of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Frank Swartz of Summit Hill, Pa., before the Keystone A. C., resulted in a draw. The men fought evenly until the thirteenth round, when Belschman landed a left swing on the jaw and a terrible right swing over the right eye, almost putting out Swartz. The latter remained to the end, however, and did excellent work in the last two rounds, showing no signs of the terrible punishment he had received.

GOOD BOXING AT OSHKOSH.

About six hundred sports from Oshkosh, Wis., and surrounding towns were present at the fourth exhibition of the Oshkosh Athletic Club on April 9. In the preliminaries Johnny Stone, of Milwaukee, was given the decision over Will Langens, of Milwaukee, in six rounds, and Harry Falls, of Oshkosh, knocked out Danny Walsh, of Milwaukee, in three rounds. The main bout was eight rounds. Jake Magner got the decision over "Kid" Munzie in a hard fought battle. James Bardell, of Chicago, refereed the fight, and Tom Ryan, of Oshkosh, was timekeeper.

BILLY SMITH GETS A WALLOPING IN ENGLAND

"Parson" Davies Honored by the Grand Lodge of Elks---Another Transatlantic Trip for McCoy---Globe Trotting Jack Grace---Gossip.

Considerable of the haze which now envelopes the pugilistic situation would be cleared away if Terry McGovern, or Sam Harris, his manager, would enlighten us upon the subject of the former engaging in a battle with Frank Erne for the lightweight championship of the world, a title which the latter clings to with all the tenacity of an aeronaut to a parachute, and an honor which, by the way, McGovern is ambitious to acquire, since he allows himself to be billed everywhere as the lightweight champion. But the difference between the two men is conspicuous for the reason that Erne is willing to risk the loss of his accredited possession by fighting the little "Brooklyn Thunderbolt" for it again, but the latter evinces no disposition to acquire the title in this way. It will be remembered that some months ago McGovern administered a most humiliating thrashing to Erne, but at the ringside weight of 126 pounds. This is five pounds below the lightweight limit and Erne rejoiced in the fact that, although he lost considerable blood and much reputation, yet he still clung to his highly prized title.

Erne has always attributed his defeat to being compelled to "do" the weight in the middle of a hot summer, and on the eventful night of the affair was really too weak to fight.

He has tried on every opportune occasion to induce his conqueror to rematch with him at a consistent weight—130—and as a further inducement has expressed a willingness to let the possession of the title go with the outcome, but to all his protestations McGovern has turned an unwilling ear, until finally, as a last resource, Erne preceded his rival to 'Frisco and presented his claims to the sporting crowd there in such a manner as to gain sympathy and endorsement, and now the only fight the 'Friscons are eager to see is one having McGovern and Erne as participants.

The generally accepted opinion among the sporting men on the coast is that the match between Erne and McGovern is practically sealed, signed and delivered to Jim Kennedy's club now, but it is not announced for fear of dimming the glory of the prospective McGovern-Gardner fight and any other battle that the former may be engaged for. Were it announced now that McGovern would box the lightweight champion at his own weight, there would be a howl against paying to see fights in which men of lower weight are matched against the champion. As it is, the opinion prevails that the bouts with Gardner and Bernstein were "framed up" for McGovern to win.

Jim Jeffries and Gus Ruhlin are no nearer a match to-day than they were at any time since Gov. Nash administered a solar-plexus wallop to the game in Ohio. In California, which is the only State in which such an affair could be conducted with profit, the match is only looked upon in the light of a possibility for the reason that nothing the managers of either man has done looks like clear-cut business. The man who handles Ruhlin asks for 70 per cent of the gate receipts and $600 for expenses, and insists on this demand, notwithstanding that Jeffries has stated that he is willing to fight for 60 per cent gross, and that is the limit of the National Club's offer. Billy Delaney, trainer of the champion, says: "Jeffries wants to come to the coast and is anxious to fight Ruhlin in San Francisco if the affair can be arranged. If Jeff should come I am inclined to think Ruhlin's manager, rather than have his man idle, would soon be on his way ready and willing to clinch a match."

I understand that both the Twentieth Century and National Athletic Clubs, of San Francisco, are anxious to secure the bout, but, as Jeffries and Ruhlin have agreed to fight before the club offering the best inducements, the highest bidder will be the successful one, no matter where the offer comes from.

One thing is certain, though, and that is 'Frisco and possibly Carson City are the only two places where a fight of such importance could be pulled off successfully.

Fights are permitted in Denver and Kentucky, but the bouts in these States are limited by matchmakers to men of lighter weight and less prominence, and it is doubtful if the authorities would approve of heavy-weight fights. For this reason the promoters in Denver and Kentucky are keeping their hands clear of the heavyweights, as they do not intend to spoil a good thing. With Denver and Kentucky out of it, California and Nevada have the bidding all to themselves.

Unless a good sized guarantee is hung up by Stuart it is doubtful if the Carson City proposition would be considered seriously by the boxers. They realize, of course, that there would be more money in a bout at San Francisco, and it looks as though the final bidding will resolve itself into a keen competition between the two clubs on the Pacific coast.

Both of these clubs are in a position to offer good inducements to the fighters, and either organization would be satisfactory to the principals.

Another four-flushing fighter got his just deserts in England the other night. This one, Billy Smith, never deserved any recognition on his past performances, and only for the fact that he represented himself to be an American with a plugged record he would probably never be heard of. The best he ever did on this side was to fight a few preliminary bouts at the cheap clubs in South Brooklyn. On the strength of the questionable notoriety he received he went to England and talked himself into the graces of Manager Bettinson, of the National Sporting Club, succeeded in getting matched with John Roberts, a local featherweight of dubious prominence, and was forthwith licked in a most summary and convincing manner. They were matched to fight fifteen rounds at 126 pounds. The incentive was a purse of $1,500 and a side bet. During the first three rounds the alleged American seemed to have a chance. After that, however, Roberts cut loose and inflicted severe punishment about the body. In the fourth round Smith, in delivering a hard blow, dislocated his right arm. At least that is what his handlers said after he had been whipped. About the same time that Smith knocked his arm out of place he developed muscle cramps in his legs.

Roberts continued to use his opponent as a punching bag until the eighth round. Then a right hand swing on the jaw sent Smith to the floor. When he arose, after taking the full count, he was again knocked down with another jolt on the jaw. This time he was too weak to arise and he was counted out.

CHARLES E. (PARSON) DAVIES.

Famous Promoter of Sporting Enterprises and Theatrical Manager.

The portrait on this page is that of Chas. E. (Parson) Davies, the eminent promoter of sporting enterprises, and accompanying Mr. Davies' picture is one of the medals recently presented to him by the Grand Lodge of Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in commemoration of the splendid services which he rendered the organization during his incumbency of the post of Grand Exalted Ruler in 1879. The medal, which is of gold, is embellished with ornate diamond settings, which adds to its intrinsic value, although it is doubtful if they make the recipient any more appreciative of the recognition so worthily bestowed. The jewel is adorned with an elk's head and a clock, the hands of which are pointing to 11 o'clock, the significance of which is understood by every member of the order. But Mr. Davies knows that his faithful services while he presided as Grand Exalted Ruler were such as to leave such pleasing memories behind that it does not need the reminder of eleven strokes of the clock to recall him to the minds of those who in years gone by honored him by calling him to the highest position in the order. But he is proud to know that his services were appreciated and he will guard the jewel as one of the most precious souvenirs he possesses, not alone for its intrinsic value, but also because it is a true indication that his Brother Elks recognized his services while he was their Exalted Grand Ruler.

To which as a brother Elk I desire to add my congratulations!

"Kid" McCoy and George Crisp may not fight but the mere suggestion of a match will at any rate be an excuse for the former and his partner to go to Europe again, and the most exacting critic of smoking room proceedings on a transatlantic ocean steamship cannot but admit that his reason for making this trip is sufficiently justifiable.

"Jack Grace, the globe-trotting pugilist, is at it again. The last heard of Grace was in Denver," says Eddie McBride, the Buffalo pugilistic critic, "where he was ordered from town through the pull of certain sport promoters there. To-day I received a copy of the Natal (South Africa) Mercury, an odd-looking paper, which claims to be fifty-two years old. In it is an offer from Tom Duggan, well-known in America, to meet Grace, who is now in that city. Grace challenged Duggan on his arrival in South Africa. The date of the paper is March 15th. Grace is certainly the king of globe-trotters and has "Kid" McCoy beaten a mile. There is one thing Grace didn't forget to take with him, at any rate, and that was his nerve. I don't want to knock his game, but on form, Duggan ought to make him look like a side street.

Despite the efforts put forth by the Amateur Athletic Union, the Brooks bill, to permit the amateur clubs to hold boxing bouts for not more than fifteen minutes' duration in New York, is dead for this session at least. The Republican leaders of the Assembly have frowned upon any proposition that is intended to legalize any kind of boxing, fearing that in some way the promoters of prize fighting may get around the law and the same condition of affairs that existed during the reign of the Horton law will be repeated. Speaker Nixon said emphatically that the committee on rules will not report the bill, though a canvass of the members showed that there was a sentiment in favor of passing it. This sentiment has been turned to account by those members of the Legislature who were interested in the boxing clubs in days gone by, and realizing how the cat is disposed to jump, will make an effort at the next session at Albany to put a bill through that will indicate no class preference, but give amateurs and professionals equal rights.

A local newspaper the other day contained the following: "The real owners of the two-year-olds recently purchased from Phil Dwyer by F. C. McLewee is Billy Brady, the theatrical and prize fighter manager. Brady, it is said, dabbled considerably in Wall street this winter under the advice of Col. McLewee and quit $800,000 to the good. Acting also on Col. McLewee's advice, Brady is also going to take a shy at racing, and starts with a good string of two-year-olds."

Pipe is still going, I see!

Charles McCoy has become tired of the gaseous proclamations of one Bernard Reich in behalf of Thomas Sharkey:

"I do not believe," said McCoy, "that Reich has any authority to speak for Sharkey judging by the way the sailor has contradicted him. It strikes me Reich has very limited knowledge of the boxing game, and all his talk is for the purpose of advertising his business."

McCoy shouldn't blame him so much for that, however. He has distributed quite an amount of advertising "guff" himself in his time.

There are in the POLICE GAZETTE office photographs of Mr. Rickaby, Reilly, Selby, Johnson and Litchfield, but the first names or addresses are not given. Will they or their friends kindly send the necessary information to the sporting editor at once?

DIXON MADE A POOR REFEREE.

Tommy Sullivan of Brooklyn, lost to Billy Gardner of Lowell, Mass., in eleven rounds in the latter city, on April 19. The match was made between Gardner and Tim Callahan, but Sullivan was substituted. He was somewhat over the stipulated weight—126 pounds.

Sullivan was the aggressor at the start, but after the sixth round Gardner had the advantage, using a hard left jab with repeated success.

In the eleventh a few jabs made Sullivan groggy and a left swing put him down. He looked toward his seconds, who immediately threw in the sponge and undoubtedly saved a knockout.

The referee was George Dixon, the ex-champion featherweight, and he was a decided "frost." In the third round he disqualified Sullivan on an alleged foul, which no one saw, and after several minutes wrangling, the boxers proceeded.

In the tenth round Sullivan uppercut Gardner in a clinch, and again Dixon ordered him to his corner on a foul. Once more the audience protested, and the bout was allowed to go on.

The preliminary was a ten round draw between John Dion of Lowell, and Jack Fitzpatrick of Newton.

GOOD BOXING IN OMAHA.

The Tri-City Athletic Club of South Omaha, Neb., gave its initial boxing show the other evening under the most promising auspices. Blum's old historic hall, now the Red Light Theatre, never before held such a crowd. It was absolutely jammed from pit to dome and it would have been a difficult matter to have forced in another spectator, had he been as slender as a wooden toothpick. The club has every reason to pat itself on the back for a more brilliant success has not before been scored in the boxing line in the Magic City.

The event of the night was a twenty-round affair between Ole Olesen, the Chicago Swede, and Halch Smith, the local colored champion. Referee Ed Rothery called it a draw.

BOB-FITZ IN A

--TOO MUCH STAGE KISSING--

FAMILY MIX-UP

Dressing Room Altercation Followed "Honest Blacksmith."

UNDERSTUDY TOO REAL

An Exchange of Osculatory Favors to Which Mrs. Fitz Objected.

The Fitzsimmons household was disrupted last week by an exchange of hostilities and uppercuts which ultimately led to the pugilist's being placed under arrest. It was in the "Honest Blacksmith," a play in which Bob Fitzsimmons and his wife were appearing in Washington, D. C., that the additional domestic drama, full of action, tears and heart interest was introduced. The trouble really began in Harrisburg, Pa., several nights previous. Mrs. Fitzsimmons, who plays the sweetheart, became ill, her understudy, Jessie Ralph, taking her place. In the fourth act of the melodrama the sweetheart of the "Honest Blacksmith" kisses him, bidding him farewell as he goes away to fight in the ring, and when it was reported to Mrs. Fitzsimmons at their hotel that her understudy was performing this act of osculation with a fervor that was even too realistic for the stage, she grew very angry. She threw the dinner dishes and other articles at the honest blacksmith, who ran out of the dining room, appealing to his manager for protection. She also announced her intention of assuming her part in Washington in spite of advice of her physician.

During the scene referred to Mrs. Fitzsimmons declined to kiss her husband when the proper time came. This made the bronze-haired pugilist very angry, but he was apparently not near as angry as was the buxom missus. She had imbibed considerable of the combative spirit that has stood her lesser half in such good stead, and when she came across Miss Jessie Ralph, a lady member of the company, just after the curtain was rung down on the last act, she drew back her good right hand and landed on Miss Ralph's cheek. Miss Ralph countered with a burst of tears and loud lamentations. Bob heard the wall and started for the scene from his dressing room on the second floor. Mrs. Fitzsimmons made for the same room as quickly as she could, and locked the door. After Miss Ralph explained to Bob and to the other members of the company who had gathered around, how terribly she had been punished, the honest farmer was very wroth, and strode up to the dressing room. He found the door locked, but went in nevertheless. One blow from his mighty fist split the portal from top to bottom, and the next two or three minutes were full of excitement. Mrs. Fitzsimmons was reported to have received evidence of the pugilist's affectionate caresses in the shape of a blackened eye.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons wept, and was joined in her grief by Robert Fitzsimmons, Jr., who also appears in the play. The stage doorkeeper summoned Officer Doyle, who was near the theatre, and the arm of the law came in and mildly told Bob that he was under arrest.

"All right, I'll go along," said Bob, and whistling to his big dog he started down D street towards the station. When he got about half way he suddenly turned north.

"This is the way to the station," said Doyle.

"But I'm going this way," said the man who knocked out Corbett.

"Oh, all right," agreed Doyle, cheerfully, "I'll fix it up with the manager."

"I don't give a d—d how you fix it," replied Bob, and he went on his way.

Fitzsimmons' manager accompanied Doyle to the station later, and assured the man in charge that Mrs. Fitzsimmons was to leave for New York on a midnight train, so that it would be useless to bring Bob into the police court. Officer Doyle went back to the theatre and then to the hotel, where he convinced himself that this story was true. At any rate, it was true enough for him, as he was not particularly anxious to bring the lanky fighter to the station unaided.

Bob alleges that he only acted the part as the stage manager directed. Miss Ralph also asserts that Bob kept well within the lines of histrionic circumspection. At any rate, whatever caused it, there was a lively bust up in the menage. Bob is still tramping with the show, Mrs. Fitz is sojourning in connubial loneliness in New York city, and Miss Ralph, the innocent cause of the turmoil, has been relegated to an end position on the extra line, while another lady is doing her level best to "get up" in the heroine's part. In the kissing scene, however, Bob blows a kiss from the tips of his fingers as he leaves the stage instead of indulging in the customary osculatory exchange.

GARDNER DEFEATED HURLEY.

It only required five rounds for Tim Hurley, of Susquehanna, to be convinced that he was no match for George Gardner, the Lowell, Mass., pugilist, who recently came back from South Africa. The fight took place at Manchester, N. H., on April 18, and Hurley's seconds threw up the sponge just about as the men were to be called up for the sixth round.

The go was scheduled for fifteen rounds and was given under the auspices of the Queen City Athletic Club. Gardner worked both hands to good effect on Hurley's stomach and ribs, not forgetting to land a few now and then on the face in the first three rounds.

The fifth and last round was Gardner's from the start. He put his man to the floor twice and the gong saved Hurley. After the Susquehanna man had been in his chair a few seconds his handlers threw up the sponge.

B. B., Ashland, Wis.—A bets John L. Sullivan was never knocked down in his career as champion of America by anyone but Charley Mitchell; B bets that he was knocked down by John A. Hogan during his career as champion of America (barring Corbett)? B wins.

R. H., St. Louis, Mo.—Did ever the Great Eastern steamer go to the harbor of Dublin in the years of 1885 or '87? Might have put into Dublin harbor while she was engaged in the cable service. Have no record of it, however. Last heard of she was a coal hulk in the harbor of Gibraltar.

J. R., Elmira, N. Y.—A bets that the time Charley Murphy made the one-mile record at Maywood, Long Island, he wore a belt around him and a rope with a pulley attached to the back end of the car which he was paced by so in case of accident his life would not be in danger? He wore some appliance of that sort.

Readers, Chicago, Ill.—In a four-handed game of seven-up, we, the following, bet, M. McDonough and P. Burke bet E. Casey and I. White; the four of us play until the last card is played when McDonough discovers he is short one card and claims four times because the cards were all there when counted. It is a misdeal.

J. C., Cohoes, N. Y.—In a four-handed game of poker, A is the dealer in a jack-pot, B breaks it, C stays, D passes and A also passes; when it comes to draw cards B finds out that he has no breakers; C has a pair of aces and claims the pot; can B draw back what money he put in when he broke the pot? C wins and B loses his money.

R. D., Chicago.—Is there a bridge in New York called the Bridge of Sighs and is this the bridge referred to in the song called "Across the Bridge of

CHAS. WARD MACDEVITT, ("M. de Vitt").
The Energetic Police Gazette Correspondent at Los Angeles, Cal., and Popular Local Pugilistic Enthusiast.

Sighs? Yes, it is a structure built across Franklin street connecting the Criminal Court building with the Tombs prison. The original bridge referred to in the poem was in Venice.

S. J. B., New York.—In a game of five-handed euchre, call on the ace, A takes in a trick and turns it down in front of him, and leads again; B and C play; it is now D's turn to play, but D asks for the privilege of looking at the last trick that A took in. Has he not the privilege of looking at the last trick? No right to look.

W. H. D., —What is good for weak ankles? Do you know of any fighters whose teeth are filled? Can a man enter the ring after he has had an operation performed? 1. Shoes, boned the same as a corset; any specialist who makes shoes for deformed feet can make you a pair. 2. Yes, Jimmy Handler, Jim Corbett and many others. 3. Depends upon how serious an operation it is.

W. W., Schron Lake.—A, B and C are playing draw poker; A opens a jack-pot, B and C stay; A calls for three cards, also B and C call for three; the dealer gives A three cards and in doing so turns the third card face up; A calls for the next top card, and the dealer deals to B and C and then gives A his card; A claims he should have dealt to him before giving B and C their three cards. Who is right? Dealer.

F. V. P., Jacksonville, Fla.—A and B are playing a game of pool, who can put them in in the least number of shots; both put them in in the same number of shots; C bet D A would win; who wins? B bets F he will put them in in less shots than he; they tied; who wins? Playing the same game as above; A bets B he would beat him a game of pool; both make 60; who wins? 1. C loses on a technicality. 2. Z loses. 3. B wins.

W. R. B., Winona, Miss.—Golf pool; the idea being to pocket the object ball in the least number of shots, six pockets, the rotation scheme being the idea; A leads in the contest, pocketing the ball in the required succession in eighteen shots; B bets that he can pocket the ball in a less number of shots; he pockets the ball in the same number—eighteen shots—and claims a tie. Who wins? B does not tie. He loses by the terms of the agreement you give.

F. H., Galveston.—Four men are playing jack-pot; A passes, B passes, and also C; D opens the pot, for the downs, thinking he has a straight, and has no stayer; when it comes to show his openers he discovers a mistake in his hand, and an argument comes up. A, B and C say that D should let all the money stay in the pot until somebody's hand is strong enough to win it; D says no, he has no right to do so, but has a right to let everybody's ante stay in? D draws down his money.

J. B. M., Chicago.—A, B, C, D and E are playing a game of poker; A is dealing and E to his right cuts the cards and sees something that doesn't suit him and calls for a shuffle and hands them back to A; he shuffles again; does E get another chance to cut or not? A game of euchre, four handed; A is dealing and turns up hearts; all passed and A turns it down; B makes it diamonds, next; C plays it alone; does he make four or can he play it alone? A and C are partners. 1. E has a right to cut after the last shuffle. 2. He can play it alone and make four.

Men looking for berths as ball players should write to the managers of the clubs.

Jockey Beauchamp, ruled off at Hawthorne a couple of years ago, is working for reinstatement.

A college that does not hold the champion strong man is no longer in the race for athletic honors.

It is reported that Jesse Burkett had a row with Robinson and declared he would jump the St. Louis team.

M. H. Tichenor & Co., of Chicago, are the new owners of Argon Star, 2:11½, and he cost them about $6,000.

J. F. Schorr has sold to R. R. Rice the bay colt Wax Taper, 4, by Imp. Candlemas, dam Utility. Price said to be $1,800.

Milton Young, of Lexington, Ky., claims that a series of extensive trials of artificial impregnation have been very successful.

Billy Nash will probably be selected as substitute umpire, and the regular staff will be Dwyer, Colgan, O'Day and Emalle.

Virginia Bradley still clings to the idea that his colt, Robert Waddell, is worth $10,000, and he refuses to sell at less than that figure.

The Coney Island Jockey Club's great fifty stakes for the autumn meeting has 464 entries. Its estimated value is close to $25,000.

The "Frisco" papers speak in glowing terms of "Truck" Egan, the young infielder whom Pittsburgh has secured from Sacramento.

Frank Robison has arrived at St. Louis and given out the tip that his team would finish better than ninth in the eight-club league.

Eddie McFarland, Adonis of the diamond and pretty good fellow, is back with the flock at the Philadelphia National League Club's park.

"Farmer" Davis, the Buffalo welterweight wrestler, who was recently thrown by Johnny Hasslip, is very eager to take a second try at Hasslip.

The race between The Abbot and Crescens, at Brighton Beach track, is off. Mr. Ketcham, owner of Crescens, returned the contracts to New York.

Sir Edward Lipton's yacht, Shamrock, is now in the Solent, where she will be ready for the spring racing, in which Shamrock II and others will take part.

The Cornell crew has established a training table, and twelve of the Ithaca's best candidates now take one meal a day under the supervision of Coach Courtney.

Pitcher Pfeister, the Cincinnati boy who was signed by McGraw for the Baltimore American League Club, let down the University of Maryland team with three hits.

Baxter, the University of Pennsylvania's high jumper, is training for the relay carnival, when he will compete in the high jump against the best jumpers of the colleges.

The match race between Crescens and Charley Herr, scheduled for the October meeting of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, is now an assured fact.

It turns out that the reported death of John Duffy, the bookmaker, was a mistake. He is alive and is traveling through the South and West with a hope of regaining his health.

The wonderful improvement in harness speed during the past decade is shown by the fact that there were 408 heats trotted and paced in 2:10 or better in contested races last season.

"It would be folly for any one to say that prospects are bright for the national game this year," said Nick Young. "Those who have been through a baseball war know better."

Motley, winner of the Carter Handicap at Aqueduct on the opening day, is a gray mare, four years old, and was bred by the late Marcus Daly at Bitter Root Stud, in Montana.

"Dusty" Miller, the former Toledo player and Cincinnati Red, is to re-enter the baseball world. It was announced recently that he had made up his mind to play on the Toledo team.

Connie Mack added another man to the Philadelphia American League Club in the person of Infielder Carr, who played first base for the Toronto Eastern League Club last season.

The sporting columns of the "Paris Presse" contain an article entitled "The Negro Everywhere." The article says: "All the tracks of Europe are positively wild to secure the presence of the negro racer."

Billy Porter, a well-known horseman, who has raced on every track in the East and West, will henceforth confine his operations to the roped arena. Porter has taken the management of Dan Creedon and Walter Croake.

President Young says the League has voted a return to the old rule giving a player his base for being hit by a pitched ball, unless he plainly avoids making any effort to get out of the way of the ball from the pitcher, and thereby permits himself to be so hit.

The National Rifle Association of America has received assurances of the presence of at least three foreign rifle teams, representing Ulster, Ireland; Switzerland and Canada, at the international rifle shooting tournament to be held at Sea Girt, N. J., next September.

Weak Men

Prof. Laborde's Wonderful French Preparation

"CALTHOS"

Restores Lost Manhood.

5 DAYS' TRIAL TREATMENT
Absolutely FREE by Sealed Mail.

PROF. JULES LABORDE,
DISCOVERER OF "CALTHOS."

"CALTHOS" is put before you on its merits alone. Try it and put it to the test. Try it free. There is no security required—no O. O. D. scheme. Send us your name and address, and we will send you enough "CALTHOS" to last five days. It will be sent in a sealed package by mail. The marvelous French remedy "CALTHOS" recently introduced in this country by the Von Mohl Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio, one of the largest, richest and most responsible business firms in the United States, has attracted the attention of the entire medical profession because of the wonderful cures it has effected. If you suffer from Lost Manhood, Varicocele, Weakness of any nature in the Sexual Organs or Nerves, (no matter how caused,) or if the parts are undeveloped or have shrunk or wasted away "CALTHOS" will restore you.

"CALTHOS" is the discovery of Prof. Jules Laborde, famed in Paris as France's foremost specialist. "CALTHOS" is the only remedy recognized by the medical profession as a specific cure for weak men. "CALTHOS" has the endorsement of the Ger-man and French governments, and is largely used in the standing armies of those countries. All correspondence relating to the "CALTHOS" department of our business is strictly confidential. We neither publish nor furnish testimonials.
